White House Provides Sirica Tapes of 10 Conversations

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP) --Judge John Sirica received the tapes of 10 more White House conversations today and gave President Nixon until Wednes to surrender notes of his Water gate conversations with key aides in March and April, 1973,

The Supreme Court ruled last month that President Nixon must surrender tapes of 64 White House conversations to Judge Sirica under a subpoena requested by Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

Judge Sirica will review the material to decide how much of it Mr. Jaworski can use as evidence in the Sept. 9 trial of six former White House and Nixon re-election campaign aides charged with participating in the Watergate cover-up. The subpoens also calls for the White House to deliver documents related to the 64 conversations, including notes made by Mr. Nixon and his former top advisers, H. R. Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Charles Colson.

Executive Privilege Some of the notes made by Ehrlichman, Colson and Mr. Haldeman were turned over today clong with a White House brief claiming that much of the material should be withheld from Mr. Jaworski on grounds of executive

The White House brief said that the privilege is claimed for portions which "are not related to the subject matter before the Assistant Special Prosecutor Richarl Ben-Veniste asked White House attorney Richard Hauser when the remaining tapes and documents would be produced.

Mr. Hauser replied that a search for the documents is conthuing under the supervision of Mr. Nixon's chief attorney, James St. Clair.

He then ordered the material produced at an open hearing Wednesday afternoon.

The tapes delivered to the court today contained 10 conversations involving Mr. Nixon, Mr. Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson in June, 1973, during the first days following the Watergate break-in and in February, March, April and June, 1973.

Tapes of 20 other conversations were delivered to Judge Sirica Wednesday. The judge also may have some tapes containing some of the other 31 conversations.

Dean Gets 1-4 Years For Role in Cover-Up

He Will Serve A Minimum Of 12 Months

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (IHT) John Dean 3d, President Nixon's principal accuser in the Watergate scandal, today was sentenced to serve one to four years in prison for conspiracy in the U.S. District Judge John Strica released the 35-year-old attorney on personal bond until he begins his sentence Sept. 3. He will not be eligible for parole until he has served one year.

The judge said he would recommend that Mr. Dean serve his sentence in the minimum security prison at Lompoc, Calif. He commended Dean for helping to care for his wife's seriously ill mother and said he would delay the date of his confinement for that reason.

Dean became nationally known during his testimony about White House involvement in the coverup last summer before the televised Senate Watergate hearings. Pleaded Guilty

He pleaded guilty Oct. 19 to a single count of conspiracy in the cover-up and could have been sentenced to five years in jail and fined $10,000.

Today, standing alone before Judge Sirica, he said "The only thing I ask for is your compassion and understanding. I have done wrong, and I realize the wrong that I have done. "I was involved in a corrup tion of government and abuse of high office. But to say I am sorry is not enough. I have done everything I can in the last 18 months to right the grong. Whatever the court judges me, I will continue the same course." Dean, who is likely to be a principal witness for the prosecution at next month's Watergate cover-up trial bit his lip when Judge Sirica announced the sentence. He looked shaken when he left the court room with a U.S. marshal afterward.

Appealing for leniency, Dean's counsel, Charles Shaffer, said, Dean is the one who broke the case for the government. Every time he testified, he told the truth. Dean, he said, "attempted to end the cover-up before there was any publicity."

Several Republican offices, it was learned, have been researching the legality of passing leg-islation letting President Nixon escape all criminal prosecution if he agrees to resign before the Senate trial starts.

The mechanism suggested by a Capitol Hill attorney is a "plea in bar," the device usually used in plea-bargaining in American courts, in which the accused pleads guilty to a lesser charge in a manner that gives him doublejeopardy protection against future

The attorney suggested that the President could resign—without moeding specific guilt—in return for a joint resolution stating that the resignation consitutes a "plea in bar" against prosecution anywhere on any criminal charges arising from the basic set of which caused the resignation. The committee is working in the awareness that the outcome of a Senate impeachment trial, as well as public acceptance of any guilty verdict, would hinge to a great extent on whether Amercan public opinion is convinced the trial procedures are fair. Guidelines Urged

Some senators fear that, unless definite guidelines are laid out in advance on standards of proof and admissibility of evidence, there may be charges of "kangaroo court" from the White House. Alternatively, lack of clear evidence and proof rules could give Chief Justice Warren Burger, as presiding officer, the cp-portunity to try to impose his own rules. They say Chief Justice Burger, for example, might well assert that beyond a reasonable doubt" should be the proper stan-

To avert such possibilities, some senators favor adopting specific rules of evidence in advance and specific guidelines on a standard of proof. Others believe existing rules and precedents are adequate and the Senate should not bind itself to new ones. Any move by the presiding officer to interpose his own rules could be overridden by a majority vote, the Democratic whip, Robert Byrd, West Virginia, ready on the books.

CIA Reportedly Is Instructed Not to Interfere in Greece

The CIA stopped its subsidies for Greek political figures about two years ago, a high American official said.

The operative closest to Gen. Ioannides was said to have been Peter Koromilas, a Greek-American who also went by the name of Korom. A State Department official said that when Mr. Potts left Athens in August, 1972, his fareparty was attended by virtually every member of the military junta. Ambassador Tasca had adopted chilly attitude toward the Athens junta and was appalled that the CIA section chief would give a party that contradicted the position the American amassador had taken.

State Department officials who have served in Greece commented in background interviews on what they described as a negative role played in the past by the agency in Greek affairs. One of them mentioned John Maury, the agency's station chief in Athens from 1962 to 1968. "Maury worked on behalf of the palace in 1965," the official "He helped King Constantine buy Center Union deputies so that the George Padandreou government was toppled."

Panandreou Flirt

The agency also flirted briefly with Mr. Papandreou and his Harvard-educated son, Andreas, in the early 1960s, a former Greek official said "In the beginning, say about 1960 or '62 the CIA used Andreas as an agent, as a resource, and supported him," a Greek source said, "His buddy was Campbell," he added, referring to Laughlin Campbell, the CIA station chief from 1959 to 1962. In his 1970 book, "Democracy at Gunpoint," Andreas Papandreou describes a scene in 1961 in which he had an altercation with Mr. Campbell.

Now retired and living in Washington, Mr. Campbell declined to talk about his Greek service.

A knowledgeable Greek said that Stavis Milton, an operative who objected to the "cozy" relatlonship between the agency and the junta leaders during the last seven years, was moved out of Greece and sent to Iran and 1 ter to the Far East.

Greek-Americans Recruited

Mr. Milton was described as one of numerous Greek-Americans recruited by the agency in the early days of its operations in Greece. Another was said to be Thomas Karamessines, a 57-yearold New Yorker who served in Athens from 1947 to 1948, during the struggle against the Communists, then again as station chief from 1951 to 1953.

Mr. Karamessines rose to head the agency's clandestine services before his retirement recently. The agency also used enterprises of Thomas Pappas, the 75year-old Greek-American industrialist, as a cover for its operations in Greece, according to the Greek source. A spokesman at the headquarters of the agency, in Langley, Va., said he had no general comment on the allegations. He did say, however, that CIA agents follow orders approved at the highest level in Washington.

CIA Assesses Soviet Role in Indian Ocean

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP) .-The Cantral Intelligence Agency predicts that the Soviet Union will match any increase in U.S. naval forces in the Indian Ocean. Without a substantial U.S. increase, the Soviet buildup probabiy would continue slowly and steadily, on the order of one or two warships a year. CIA director William Colby has told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Mr. Colby's appraisal was made before the Armed Services Subcommittee on Military Construc-

Sen. Stuart Symington said Mr. Colby's assessment of Soviet activity in the Indian Ocean was requested because the Navy seeks to justify its plan to set up a base on the British island of Diego Garcia, partly on the basis of countering the Soviet buildup.

Mr. Colby said the Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean has grown slowly and steadily for the last six years, but the forces are "relatively small and inactive."

Six Combat Ships

Today, Mr. Colby said, there are six Soviet surface combat ships, one submarine, nine minesweepers and 11 support ships in But he said there have been surges in Soviet deployment, "highly responsive to U.S. naval activities," following the Indo-Pakistani war in November, 1971, and during the Arab-Israeli war last October.

"Soviet leaders have shown that they will maintain a naval presence in the ocean at least equal to, if not greater than, that of the U.S. Navy," Mr. Colby said. He said the authorization of the Diego Garcia expansion by Congress "will certainly attract their attention."

France Takes Tough Steps in Jail Revol

rebellion Interior Minister Michel Ponistowski ordered police to turn the ancient transit cells of the Paris Palace of Justice into a temporary prison to make sure that criminals newly convicted of serious crimes would not be set free for want of an available jail.

Mr. Poniatowski also doubled to 48 hours the time that police are allowed to detain suspects before having them charged.

These measures were taken as a result of the government's decision to toughen its policy toward both the striking guards and the rebellious prisoners. Justice Minister Jean Lecanuet has declared to prison guards that nothing will be done to improve the situation and their working conditions until calm is restored and Mr. Poniatowski has ordered police to shoot any convicts who try to escape.

The prison rioting, which has left six prisoners dead, caused widespread damage and prompted the guards' walkout, continued for a 13th day today. It spread to France's overseas territories with a mutiny in the jail on the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe. Convicts stoned guards and force persons were injured when police intervened. In France, the grievances of the prisoners and guards led to a rare show of solidarity. I think his chances of getting convicted are a helluya lot stronger than a few weeks ago. If Barry Goldwater leaves the reservation, it's all over." Sen. Bob Doie, R-Kan., former GOP national chairman and a candidate for re-election to the Senate, said today, "Two been hearing 80 to 40 against the President, I'm not certain it's accurate and don't know what the mood of the country will be in a few mouths when we get to a vote. Sen. Dole added that he has not made up his own mind yet and said, "I don't feel any obligation to get out and defend the President [on the floor]. Some senators would be willing to do so if they had all the facts, but who's going to stand up and say anything if it turns out to be less than accurate?"

Support Ereding

"His support is eroding every day," said Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., who supported the President on most military and for-eign-policy issues during the Vietnam war.

"It's anybody's guess," said Russell Long, D-La, also a Nixon supporter on many policy issues. "There may not be enough votes at the moment, but his position has eroded. There is every indication it's going to get worse. I'd say more than half would vote for conviction now. I don't know how I'm going to vote."

A prominent GOP senator has placed the anti-Nixon vote at 58 to 42 at present, another at 60 to 20, with the 20 others possibly going either way. The Senate's two best Democratic vote-counters both said that they "think there will be enough votes" unless ent comes up with new evidence to overcome the impact of what has already come out.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, cautioned that it is "precipitous to say" how the final vote will come out, warning that neither he nor virtually any other senator he knew is "locked into any-ing among senators that Presi-

ground for months and has made no gains whatever in the Senate. Possibly the most significant factor is the shrinkage of what has been called the "hard-core" pro-Nixon vote. A few months ago, White House backers were walking around scoffing at the possibility of impeachment and asserting, "We've got 40 to 50 votes against conviction by the Senate." That confident tone is gone and conservatives who were believed to be Nixon bitter-enders are talking privately about wanting out. A Southern Republican, thought to be fanatically loyal to the President, has shifted in recent months and has been telling associates that unless the White House comes up with some amazing new syidence on Mr. Nixon's behalf, he finds it hard to imagine himself voting "no" when the verdict is voted on following the Senate trial. He said he fervently hopes the President will resign before it comes to that and save the nation and the GOP from severe disruption. This view is shared by many Republicans.

U.S. Phone Strike Set WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP).— Leaders of 750,000 U.S. telephone workers have called a nationwide strike against the Bell system to begin at 12:01 a.m. Monday if negotiators fail to agree on a new contract.

Two other Republicans interviewed at the windup of the annual Western Governors Conference earlier this week said that Gov. Reagan would enjoy strong support if Mr. Ford is not a candidate.

Gov. Reagan, who did not attend the conference because of other commitments," has made several political trips around the United States in recent months to position himself for a probable try for the nomination.

Gov. Reagan intends to campaign for Republican candidates throughout the nation this fall, a strategy that could earn him political IOUs cashable in 1976. After he retires from office in January, the Californian plans to embark on a nationwide speaking tour to assess his chances of capturing the presidential nomi-nation, which eluded him in 1968.

One of Gov. Reagan's staunchvative Gov. Jack Williams of Arizona, said that he doubted Gov. Reagan would become the party standard bearer.

"Ron is a great guy. I love him. But the media will destroy him just like they did [Sen. Barry] Goldwater," said Gov. Williams, referring to the unsuccessful 1964 presidential bid of the Arizona Republican. Gov. Williams also asked, "When was the last time a vicepresident didn't get a nomination if he wanted it?" Oregon Gov. Tom McCall, s party liberal frequently at odds with his California neighbor, said. "The mood won't be pro-

Reagan" in 1976. The fact that Gov. Reagan currently enjoys solid support for the nomination from many state and local GOP chairmen, Gov. McCail said, will not be significant in 1976 because these groups represent "the present establishment" and "the Republican party is going to be in different hands after seventy-four." Gov. McCall acknowledged that Mr. Ford "has got the inside track whether he's president or not" by Sloppy Records Blamed in 'Lost' $5 Million in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (AP).— Investigators say almost $5.4 million in securities reported missing from a city vault apparently just could not be found because of sloppy bookkeeping.

Richard Kub, Manhattan dis-trict attorney, said Wednesday that investigators traced all but $84,001 of the securities after only a few days.

The securities were reported missing two weeks ago by an accounting firm during an audit commissioned by Harrison Goldin, who succeeded Mayor Abraham Beame as controller.

City investigators searched records to reconstruct the flow of the securities in and but of the vault.

After the first day, they identified $4.092,000 of the securities as short-term U.S. Treasury notes. They were properly redeemed at maturity, but the transactions were apparently not entered in the records. Similarly, they found receipts and other documents that identified most of the remaining $1,235,008.

Johnson Ex-Aide Repudiates Claim of Aid to Milk Lobby

By George Lardner Jr.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (WP). —Rep. James Jones D-Okla., in a memo that he now describes as pure fiction, wrote the Associated Milk Producers, Inc., that he got President Lyndon Johnson to approve a lame-duck decision on milk price supports at a time when the dairy loboy was trying to hire Mr. Jones as one of its lawyers.

Mr. Jones was President John-son's appointments secretary before he left the White House in January, 1969, and joined the milk producers cooperative, og a $40,000-a-year retainer.

On Dec. 26, 1968, departing Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman announced that milk price supports would be continued at the then-prevailing level of $4.28 a hundredweight through President Nixon's first year in office.

Simply "Tail Story"

Rep. Jones acknowledged yesterday that he wrote a memo in 1972 to AMPI, in which he claimed credit for the decision. But he said it was simply a "tall story" made up to protest AMPI's plans to end his employment. "The politically smart thing to do would be to say nothing," the 35-year-old congressman declared of the note. "The facts are that the milk price decision didn't even come to the President." Rep. Jones said he was suffer-ing from the flu and "dizzy on some sort of drug" his doctor had given him when he wrote the The Jones memo was released yesterday among the evidence compiled by the Senate Watergate committee in its investigations of the milk producers' political dealings. In the note, Mr. Jones said that AMPI's top officials. Harold Nelson and David Parr, offered to hire him "early in December, 1968, according to the notes from my files." He said that Mr. Parr and Mr. Nelson were also anxious the time to have President Johnson set milk price supports at $4.28 for the year after he left

Dummy Units Used to Funnel

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP) .-Two top executives of Texas millionnaire Ross Perot's computer company secretly funneled $100. 000 through dummy committees into the 1972 presidential cam-paign of Rep. Wilbur Mills, D Ark., according to Senate Watergate committee files.

The firm, Electronic Data Systems, Inc., of Dallas, is a major processor of health-insurance claims. Rep. Mills, the chairman of the House Ways and Mean: Committee, is expected to have ar influence on any future nationa health insurance plan.

The money was given by the company president, Milledge Hart 3d, and a regional vicepresident, Mervin Stauffer, both of Dallas Neither was available for comment.

The two men passed the funds to 17 dummy committees set up by the Mills campaign, the records show.

Committee Names

The committees bore such names as Citizens for a Sound Nation in '72 Committee, Citizens for National Growth and Development Committee, Fiscal Sanity Committee, and Students for Better Government Committee. All the money was given on March 30, 1972, about a week before such secret donations be-came illegal. On April 7, 1973. a new campaign finance law took effect requiring full disclosure. Unlike some other candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972; Rep. Mills refused to make a voluntary disclosure of pre-April 7 contribu-The $100,000 donation constitutes the largest known gift to Rep. Mills's campaign.

It was revealed in the open files of the Senate Watergate committee, which reviewed the bank records of the dummy committees set up by the campaign.

The Donations Mr. Hart gave $3,000 to each of the 17 committees and Mr. Stauffer gave $1,000 to one committee and $3.000 to each of the 16 others, a total of $100,000.

Rep. Wilbur Mills

The committee names resembled those of dummy committees used by three big dairy cooperatives to funnel $232,000 into President Nixon's 1972 campaign before full disclosure became mandatory.

Listed as "acting secretary" for each of the committees was Terry Shea, a former employee of the largest of the dairy cooperatives, Associated Milk Producers,

Mr. Shea was one of the cooperative employees who allegedly assisted the early Mills campaign while drawing a corporate salary. The first of the committees was set up by Mr. Shea on Dec. 3, 1971, more than a month before the cooperative cut off the corporate salaries of campaign workers for Rep. Mills.

On Feb. 11, 1972, during the three-month period when the committees were being set up, Rep. M'lls announced his active candidacy. Rep. Mills has stated that he was unaware of corporate donations made to his campaign by the milk producers before that general manager, George Mehren, dropped him on Jan. 31, 1973. Notified of the plans earlier that month, Mr. Jones wrote the protest memo to Mr. Mehren on Jen. 18, 1972, in which he said he had "a gentlemen's agreement" from AMPI for a five-year re-

However, he followed up on Jan, 26, 1972, with a more formal letter to Mr. Mehren stating that he had been virtually incapacitated because of a devastring bout of flu" and, as a result, "the memo which I started to draft last week may have seemed a bit incoherent. "It was typed while I was under the influence of medication which left me dizzy and forced me to leave the office early." Mr. Jones added. "Out of an excess of zeal and a misunderstanding, my assistant mailed it instead of bringing it home to me for completion and editing."

Rep. Jones said yesterday that other statements in the enrier memo were inaccurate. For e:ample, he said that his "best recollection" is that Mr. Nelson and Mr. Part did not approach him about going to work for AMPI until January of 1969, atter Mr. Freeman's appouncement. The former Johnson aide said he did not know what prompted Mr. Freeman to make the lameduck decision but Rep. Jones guessed that incoming Nixon edministration officials might have invited it to avoid "the heat" of making the determination themselves after only a couple of months in office. In any event, Rep. Jones said the memo was "just inaccurate, My conscience is good."

How Good Is Détente?

The critical issue raised by East Germany's sound to make agreements with Communist attempt to block establishment by Bonn of an environmental agency in West Berlin is one that affects the fundamentals of the Soviet-American relationship. East German violations of the 1972 quadripartite agreement guaranteeing "unimpeded access" to Berlin pollute the overall politics of detente.

Without Soviet support, the vehement East German press campaign against the projected environmental office would never have been followed by traffic slowdowns on the autobahn to Berlin and a refusal to permit an environmental official to pass.

The United States now has rightly decided to delay the imminent establishment of diplomatic relations with East Germany, pending resolution of the dispute. But 104 other countries have exchanged ambassadors with East Germany, mostly in the wake of the quadripartite Berlin agreement: and there is little likelihood that they will break relations. The question raised now is how good is Moscow's word?

Another question raised is whether it is countries that enable them to pocket Western concessions while leaving them in position to repudiate their own.

It was always obvious that the 1972 quadripartite agreement could not change the geographic location of Berlin, 110 miles within East Germany. For West Berlin, vulnerability was to become security through legal commitments by the Soviet Union and East Germany to keep hands off the access routes. The question raised now is how good is Moscow's word?

The Soviet Union is offering detente to the United States and improved political relations to obtain trade and American high technology. The high technology, once transmitted, becomes Soviet property beyond recall. But the improved political relations depend on Moscow's pledged word and can be repudiated from one day to the next.

What Moscow must realize now is that East German interference with the Berlin access routes raises basic questions about Soviet good faith.

Turkish 'Truce'

Turkey's continued violations of the Cyprus truce, right on the heels of a second cease-fire agreement, are an affront to its allies in NATO and the world community in

The Security Council's one-day delay in authorizing interposition of the UN peacekeeping force—as a result of a Soviet veto. which now has been withdrawn—does not justify in any way the succession of new Turkish violations: seizure of Greek Cypriot villages: orders to UN units to leave the Turkish occupation zone, and the continued Turkish military buildup on the island.

The terms obtained in the Geneva peace negotiations were substantially in Turkey's favor. For Turkey now to exploit its advantages to improve its position further in violation of solemn agreements can only handicap the future prospects of a lasting settlement and undermine the new Athens gov-

Turkish Premier Ecevit's threat to improve the arms and training of irregular Turkish Cypriot forces in areas of Cyprus outside the Turkish occupation zone, rather than rely on UN protection as in the past, comes at a moment when increased cooperation with the UN is what is required. Equally ominous is Mr. Ecevit's claim that Turkey has the right under the new Geneva accords and the 1960 agreements to reinforce its units on Cyprus at will.

There are other indicators that Turkeyinstead of seeking an early political settlement maintaining an independent, unitary Cyprus-is digging in for a long stay that would, in effect, impose partition and even "double Enosis"-union of the two parts of the island with Greece and Turkey respectively. Mr. Ecevit and Turkey's energy minister have spoken of a crash program to build a large power plant, fuel storage and air and seaport facilities on Cyprus, pius a submarine pipeline from Turkey to supply water to Kyrenia on Cyprus. Neither Turkey's allies in NATO nor the UN can accept such a program and it is important that they make this clear immediately. As supplier of arms to Turkey, the United States has-or ought to have-particularly strong leverage. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Signal From Lisbon

The announcement by President Antonio ment, the principal architect of the coup. de Spinola of the promulgation of a new law permitting Portugal to free Angola, Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau gives proof forming policy into political reality. Althat Lisbon has developed a clear policy line though the issue of independence for Guion independence for its African colonies.

The coup last April indicated a sharp change in Portugal's course, from the grim preservation of its African empire by any means necessary, to recognition of 20thcentury African realities. But then, the new government sent out alternating signals as to just what the new policy was to be. President Spinola favored granting the colonies a substantial amount of autonomy within a Portuguese federation. Others in the government were promising full independence within the year. The uncertainty was heightened by the downfall of the provisional cabinet just two months after it had been installed, President Spinola's announcement puts the government squarely in line with the position favored by the Armed Forces Moveand with the African liberation movement.

What remains is the hard task of transnea-Bissau is all but settled, the transfer of power in Mozambique and Angola raises difficult questions. Terrorist activities generally attributed to right-wing elements opposed to independence have been reported in both territories. In Mozambique, Portugal must come to terms with the Mozambique Liberation Front. In Angola, Lisbon faces not one but three liberation movements. In both areas, there is the major problem of the legitimate interests of substantial white settler populations.

Thus, while independence for Portuguese Africa will not automatically follow at once from President Spinola's announcement, the development of a clear policy in Lisbon now means that the last great colonial empire in Africa is nearing its historic end.

International Opinion

On Nixon Resigning

On the whole, and especially from the point of view of America's foreign allies, the balance comes out in favor of [Nixon's] resignation, though subject to certain reservations. In the first place, it should be delayed until the full House of Representatives has voted, probably by August 23. This would at least allow the first stage of the impeachment procedure to be completed. and would put on record a clear expression of congressional opinion. Secondly, Mr. Nixon should find the courage to make a sufficient admission of responsibility to abort the birth of a stab-in-the-back legend. He would have nothing to lose and might regain a little moral stature by doing so. -From the Times (London).

South Korean View of Threat

What makes us all the more unhappy is the fact that such a distinguished scholar as Edwin Reischauer . . is trying to disparage the North Korean threat for purposes less than the supreme call of this nation [South Korea] at this time-prevention of another war on this peninsula. His attempt (before the U.S. House Foreign Affairs subcommitteel to link American aid to civil

The Koreans are not content, as much as their American friends are, with the extent of democratic institutions they have today. But their desire for democratic development can not and should not turn them away from the more immediate and imperative need for safeguarding what is essential to them-national security. Daddy, Did Cars Ever Use Oil?

By Bart Mills

LONDON.—International offmen today must feel a little like the railroaders of nearly a century ago.

The era of buccaneering expansion is over, political regulation is tightening and the future is bleak as low-profit utilities loom. For oilmen now, there are fewer and fewer places in the world to lay new tracks, and there is increasing pressure on govern-ments everywhere to regulate Governments in major oil-producing countries will within a few years be the sellers of 100 per cent of their own crude, up from zero per cent five years sumer countries that still have free markets in petroleum are moving toward allocating market shares and setting prices. As a result, major oil companies are becoming mere middlemen, as crude-oil procurement and product distribution increasingly become government concerns.

Oil is simply the latest commodity or service to become too important to be handled by the people who know most about it. That's said with no bitterness. Take the railroads again. The railroad men knew their business, and they knew to get out of a business that was unprofitable. The passenger lines were their most socially useful service. Government stepped in and kept the money-losing lines runningsome of them anyway.

New Energy Forms

No self-respecting major oil company these days expects to reach the year 2000 with energy as its major product. They'll be marketing different forms of energy and different uses for oil. Like the cigarette companies who diversified madly out of cigarettes, oil companies are branching into coal and nuclear power. They're also heeding the words of the Shah of Iran ("oil is too valuable to burn") by planning for the day when the petrochemical industry will consume a quarter or more of the world's oil production instead of just 6 per cent as at

The Continental Oil Co. and other oil concerns are already among America's largest coal producers. Gulf and Shell are accruing losses of hundreds of millions of dollars as the cost of entering the nuclear-reactor business. Standard Oil of Ohio gets 43 per cent of its revenues from coal and chemicals.

But why should oil ever be come unprofitable? Haven't all the major companies just been reporting fantastic profit in-Yes, but these may be the last days of nonadministered gasoline pricing in America.

In Europe, many price decisions are made, formally or informally, by governments determined not to allow oil companies to profit from the producer nations' price increases. As the Saudis and the Kuwaitis and others become more and more adept at using supply constrictions to control prices, prices will move up still higher. softheartedness would keep the Arabs from playing the market this way. Have you ever met a soft-hearted Arab oil man? No, and as prices rise Washington will discern a responsibility to cushion the blow on motorists. Gasoline retailing will become increasingly unprofitable.

Service-station operators will turn in their tire-battery-accessory franchises and sell Kentucky Fried Chicken instead, while their suppliers, the oilmen, become nuclear men. Good old government will man the pumps and clean your windshield.

is one of the few major Western countries without at least one government oil concern holding a leading share of the market. In Italy, the government seems determined to fix prices so as to drive private enterprise out of the industry, and both Shell and British Petroleum have sold their assets there in the last year. In France, a law guarantees one of the two national oil concerns a quarter of the retail market. In West Germany, a price dispute brought the companies and the government to the brink of a legal conflict. In Belgium, refinery operators closed their plants rather than sell their products at prices the government was dictating. Britain and Sweden are others with strong government presences in oil marketing.

Don't laugh. The United States

Plastics

A word about plastics. As any graduate knows, plastics are the coming thing. Here's why. being in short supply and increasingly expensive, it becomes less and less economical to use oil energy to power the factories that make things like paper bags and glass bottles. It makes better sense to use the oil not as energy but as the raw material for petrochemicals and plastics. Right now, it takes one and a half times as much oil to make a paper bag as it does to make a polyethylene sack of the same capacity. It takes two and a half times as much oil to make a nonreturnable glass bottle as does to make a polyvinyl chloride container of the same capacity. These ratios can only

So over the next decade or so the oil companies will do a lot weeping and walling. Like financially pressed Lockheed in a world crying for airplanes. they'll have increasing difficulty doing their traditional jobs. Governments make the rules, and governments will have to beil them out

But further down the road, the oil companies are already strong growth areas like nuclear

Cyprus itself provides a base for British air forces although they cannot overtiv work for the alliance because of the republic's nonaligned status.

A somewhat similar partial restriction applies to Malta where the North Atlantic powers are represented by a British rear admiral and Britain can use naval facilities until the decade's end. The Soviet Union is barred from Maltese havens end, in exchange, the United States has pledged not to send military planes or ships

But the most glittering jewel in the diadem of islands stretching across the inland sea is Crete whose famous port of Suda Bay is one of the world's great natural harbors. And, just as a homeporting agreement for the U.S. Navy in Greece caused Washington to overlook some of the nastiness of the recent Athens junta, the availability of Suda Bay's naval facilities also clearly softened U.S. policy.

Help From Athens

As a consequence, without advertising the fact, Greece allowed the U.S. Sixth Fleet to use needed naval facilities during the Arab-Israeli war last October-just as if that crisis had been covered by NATO, which wasn't the case. Suda Bay was the fleet's main base during the October confrontation. Some of its amphibious ships, capable of landing marines against opposition, were allowed to anchor there throughout the Greek conflict.

Although the Sixth Fleet operates all over the Mediterraneau and beyond its western entry at Rois. Spain, the Soviet naval contingent in this area generally concentrates just off the shores of the Middle East. Therefore the Sixth Fleet spends most of its time in the Ionian Sea and the so-called Levantine basin. The latter is the principal area of potential trouble. Therefore the Sixth Fleet maintains a strong force south of Crete where Russian submarines are considered a potential threat. These now are deprived of recommissance and strike support from long-range Soviet aircraft that used to be based in Aswan, Egypt, but have been eased out by Cairo.

The Beginning But Not the E

WASHINGTON.—The conventional view here now is that this is the beginning of the end for President Nixon, but between the beginning and the end -between voting articles of impeachment in the House Judiciary Committee and voting conviction in the Senate-lie many political struggles and legal tengles that could go on for months. -

Time, with its unpredictable events and changing moods, could be a critical factor. For example, the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson in the Senate lasted three months-from Feb. 25, 1868, until May 26, 1868, and this raises a key question.

Does the authority of the present 93d Congress expire at midnight on Jan. 2, 1975, as Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington says it does? And if so, would an uncompleted trial in the Senate have to start all over again? Jackson says "yes," and insists that the entire question would have to go back to the House Judiciary Committee in the 94th Congress.

Trial Rules

Senate leaders, of course, are trying to speed up the process by drafting rules for the trial that would avoid this complication, but the timetable is not wholly in their hands. For example, if the House votes to impeach the President around the end of August or the beginning of September, the President will ask for time to prepare his defense before the Senate. The majority leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield, is thinking that two weeks would be sufficient for this preparation but if the President asks for a month or even longer. it would be hard to deny him the time he requests.

Also, while the Senate can set rules that avoid fillbustering the issue by droning on with irrelevant material, it would be difficult to deny the President and his attorneys the opportunity to call as many defense witnesses as he likes, another time-consuming It is even possible that the trial could get into procedural arguments, such as over the authority of the present Senate after Jan. 2, in which case the President could claim that he was denied due process and refer the argument to the courts.

Presumably, common sense would prevail at some point in this process, but a long trial cannot be ruled out, and this presents the awkward prospect that the President could be impeached by the House in August and then have to try both to defend himself and exercise his executive duties for a period of months. As a result of these potential difficulties, Washington is now full of proposals about how this nightmare can be avoided. In fact, you can hardly run into a congressman these days who doesn't have some suggestion about what the President should do to change the present trend toward impeachment, government paralysis, and conviction. Among the suggestions are the following: • Sen. Goldwater thinks he should go before the House and Senate personally, respond to questions and defend himself. The theory is that this would influence the House, the Senate and the television audience in his favor.

· Failing this, he should go on television from the White House and argue his case directly to the voters....

• If impeached by the House, he should resign rather than risk a long paralyzing trial in the Senate and the interruption of the government's other urgent busine · Minally, that he should refuse to resign on the ground that this would seem a confession of guilt which he does not feel, but con-

In late 1972, Mr. Park imposed on his people a new constitution that was basically intended to maintain him in office for life. This provoked in the fall of 1973 series of demonstrations, originating with students in Seoul, and gradually encompassing intellectuals, politicians and clergy.

Emergency Decrees Mr. Park responded with some political gestures but ordered a series of emerdecrees, the fourth and latest one on April 3 of this year, aimed particularly at students. So far, about 67 individuals have been sentenced since April to terms ranging from five years

Among those arrested in the last year have been leading poets and politicians, including Yun Po Sun, a former president of South Korea, and Kim Dae Jung, an opposition leader who ran against Mr. Park in 1971. 🦿

Because of these arrests-and widespread reports of torture and forced confessions - Sen. Church and Rep. Donald Fraser, Democratic Farmer, Labor. Minn, have taken the lead in advocating suspension or cuts in the $241.5 million in security assistance proposed for Seoul in this fiscal year.

Rep. Fraser argued in a hear-ing of the Foreign Affairs subcommittee that, "in deciding upon the level of military assistance to South Korea, we should have not only taken into account the threat of aggression by the North Koreans but the fact that our assistance strengthens the South Korean government's ability to oppress its own people."

The official administration response has been given by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger:

The stability and security of South Kores were crucial to the security of the East Asian area [and this has] led us to continue economic aid and military assistance when we would not have recommended many of the actions that were taken by the government of South Korea."

He added that Japan's security depended on stability in Korea and that the Japanese agreed with the American assessment.

U.S. Expects Payments Gap, Cites $25 Billion in Oil Imports

By Thomas O'Toole

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (WP). The Treasury Department believes the United States will pay a record $25 billion for imported oil this year, a total expected to cause a balance-of-payments def-icit of at least $2 billion.

Higher prices for foreign oil and near-record imports have forced the Treasury to revise upward the estimate of the oil import bill. The estimate made in January by the National Petroleum Council was $20 billion. An informed Treasury official said yesterday that the import bill would be at least $25 billion. "The checks that U.S. companies write this year to import oil could easily total more than $25 billion," the Treasury source said. "A lot depends on demand for oil products and on whether the current price levels for imported oil sustain themselves." Early this year, the U.S. anticipated a balance-of-payments surplus of as much as $6 billion. That anticipation was long ago revised down to a deficit of $1.5 billion. A Treasury official estimated the deficit at $2 billion others believe it will be higher. A 1973 Surplus

The U.S. had a surplus last year of $1.6 billion, the first since

The source said Treasury officists fully expected prices to re-main high through 1974. He said the only thing that could force the prices down would be a sucdrop in demand, which has not happened in any industrialized nation.

BREGENZ FESTIVAL-Verdi-When He Was Still Donizetti

By David Stevens

REGENZ, Austria, Aug. 2 (IHT).-In a year that has teen some brisk activity in Verdian archaeology, the Bregenz Festival should get some kind of award for its aptly chosen, splendidly sung and buoyantly staged revival of "Il Finto Stanisiao," the composer's second opera and his only comic work besides "Falstaff," half a century

For one thing, the work really is a rarity-not just because it is so little-known, but because it reveals a composer that even experienced opera-goers do not know. Most Verdi revivals-of, say, "Attila" or "I Vespri Siciliani" or "Luisa Miller" slightly different stage in the development of the composer we already know. "Il Finto Sta-nisho" (alias "Un Giorno di Regno") shows the 26-year-old who had not quite decided to stop being Donizetti (the reigning active composer of the day-1340 and start being Verdi.

It is a two-act melodramma giocoso, in fact an opera buffa in the traditional mold to a well-carpentered libretto by Felice Romani (the experienced collaborator of Rossini, Bellini and Donizetti, among others). Although predictable in its situa-tions, it is full of good opportunities for comic singing-actors, rich in ensembles ranging up to a septet, and with plenty of chances for solo bel canto flights. Verdi met the challenge, mostly in the vocabulary of the moment, but with occasional outbursts of primitive energy and original melody that come like modest calling cards of the near future. There is also a beguiling quintet that is really a love duet set against a comic male trio-they about the artillery disposition of some battle—that Verdi must wrong men-was again a model of stylish comic acting and singing. A young baritone, Domenico Trimarchi, showed plenty of promise in the same tradition as the fake King Stanislas, who pretends for political reasons to be ruler of Poland for a day and uses his disguise to straighten things out and win back his own lover—she being radiantly sung by Margherita Rinaldi.

Two fresh-voiced young singers -mezzo Elena Zilio and tenor Vittorio Terranova-were appealing as the young lovers, although both are still innocents in matters of style and nuance, while Enrico Fissore was an excellent comic foil as the original pre-tender to the young lady's hand. Filippo Crivelli, who has staged the work before in Italy, invented some droll business that was put over by his high-spirited cast, and Gianni Quaranta's setsmainly natural-wood colored lattices—were attractively rustic period pieces, colorfully amplified by Dada Scaligerl's costumes. Piero Bellugi's conducting kept things musically on their toes, and he got good support from the Vienna Symphony and the State Opera chorus.

Bregenz's annual staple, a production on the floating stage on Lake Constance, was devoted this year to "Carmen." Given the imperatives—the huge stage some distance from the audience, the watery setting and no chance for scenery changes—the festival team came up with an ingenious and colorful production.

Toni Businger constructed a multi-level Seville that included plausible locations for each of the four acts-which were played without an intermission. Thus. the second-act tavern could be seen open for business before Act I ended, and the house fronts of the first act became the exterior of the bull ring in the final act. Something has to be aquatic in Bregenz, so Bizet's mountaineering smugglers went maritime, being led to their cove swimmer who paddled in from the lake while holding a torch up with one sam. He took a earned bow for his exertions although he got no program

Paul Vasil's effective staging also required a lot of movement of a more conventional sort, and he got it from principals and supers alike. Subtlety has to be sacrificed here, but all the singing was full-volced enough to reach across the water to the grandstand, and Anton Guadagno conducted with the vigor of a bull-ring maestro.

Rain is no stranger to Bregenz, and only on their third try (a week ago tomorrow) did the firstnight cast of Joann Grillo (Carmen), Andrej Kucharsky (José), Renate Lenhart (Micaela) and Claudio Nicolai (Escamillo) get to the end of the opera. This time the thunder clapped as Don José pulled out his danger. lightning flashed as he stuck it into Carmen, and the rain held off until everyone was racing for

THE ART MARKET

Porcelain-The Gaudier, the Better

By Souren Melikian

ONDON (INT).—Taste makes curious business. In the late 18th century and early 20th, rich people in Western Europe hought 18th century fakes. Not fake-fakes, but imitations. The inspiration was Franch; the results, mostly rubbish, albeit of different origins. There were "18th-century French ceramics" of the Meissen stemp, of Berlin interpretation, of Bohemian origin, not to speak of French imitations.

The resulting porcelain appealed to the nonvesus. riches, to the financiers of Franz Joseph's Austria, to Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany. And the gaudier, the Suddenly, while the art-market blue chips are faltering (IET, July 30), this kind of rubbish is doing very well at anothen. Again, it's a question of aesthetics. What, to many people, seems gaudy appeals, apparently, to buyers with dollars to spare in the oil-producing countries, as well as to Italians and South Americans. In all fairness it should be pointed out that aesthetic standards vary; one man's treasure is another man's piece of junk, European dealers with contacts in Italy, South America and the petrodollar countries are beginning to capitalize on this difference in sesthetic optic.

Examples

Take, for instance, the sale of English and Continental ceramics Monday at Christie's in London. The audience was small, almost entirely composed of dealers, few of them Raglish. Most of the lots were hideous—there were 288 of them. Hardly any bore dates; I doubt that any object had been made before 1830. Yet, it seemed that the more hideous the work, the better it sold

Christie's prudently referred throughout its catalogue to objects made in the "Sevres pattern," underscoring the 19th-century obsession (in Europe) with 18th-century French taste. For instance, a "Sevres pattern" tea set with portraits of court beauties and flowers went for £241 to a certain Mr. Singer. Another nightmare, a vase, probably Germanic, went for £73.50 to a Mr. Desmond to the dismay of an American dealer whose overbid failed to attract the auctioneer's

More serious stuff was to come. "A fine Sevres pattern vase-clock and cover of urn shape," a rather laborate affair combining biscuit mask heads, landscapes in oval gilt medallions and many other frills, went up to £504 in seconds. This is about twice the price of a genuine Louis XVI clock in marble and ormolu.

Another Sevres pattern dish, painted with a scene inspired by one of Lancret's sloppier works, went for £241 50. It was followed by a huge tureer, with four panels of lovers in landscapes in ribbor cartouches. An Italian dealer happily gave 244 for it

. That was peading.

Two hoge ormolu-mounted vases (95 centimeter: high) with portraits of the Bonaparte family from Uncle Napoleon and Aunt Josephine to Napoleon III Empress Eugénie and the Prince Imperial went up to a staggering $2,100. A Mr. Nyman got them Next another pair of vases (only 70 centimeter, high), painted with "classical scenes," made £1,970 Again, Nyman was the buyer.

The climax of the sale and the epitome of but taste (so bad you couldn't call it kitsch or camp)came with two big (85.5 centimeters high) Sevre rases, showing the triumph of Aphrodite and th birth of Yenna. These were 130 years old, as could be inferred from the monogram of Louis-Philippe of Prance: They went to Nyman for £2,310.

By then bidding had become aggressive. Hug Mortey-Fletcher, a director of Christie's, was n longer just taking bids but, giving a performance. H would bend over his podium, stare at the bidder anari the bids as he spelled them out, then pitch hi voice higher. Berlin porcelain plaques got passe around, again and again, bringing ever more im probable prices. And so it went.

probable prices. And so it went An American dealer was beside himself—he ha been outlied 10 times within a few minutes. "You are turning it into a nightmare," he yelled at hi rival, Nyman. But, in the hubbub among the rest less dealers, hardly anyone heard him.

A Success

A handful of professionals—Italians, German timen and Americans - had made the day While the rest of the market is sagging, no perip-porceisin is doing remarkably well. It is reall impossible to make comparisons. The category Rotten Munich porcelain circa 1910, imitatir Napoleon III porcelain, imitating 18th-centur Sevres," can hardly be said to be established. By this was certainly one of the most successful sale of hideous objets d'art that I have ever seen.

In contrast, at Sotheby's sale of glass on th same day, the prices were low while the quality wa high. English paperweights were cheaper than the have been in the past—but the French versions di well, one of them fetching £1,700. But doubties this French-taste paperweight will be resold t someone who would have liked the Christie ceraz ics. An important 17th-century engraved ewer wen for a ridiculous £380. This was a real work of artbut not the sort of thing that either Western spe ulators or oil shelichs care about.

Mervyn Willis, who directs, tries to disguise the shortcomings by mixing styles and having most of his characters make their entrances and exits as if they were practicing for a hundred meter sprint. He dresses the soldiers as samurai warriors, turns bettles into a Japanese dance routine-definitely a nono-and, where the text calls for dores to flutter, releases some gas-filled balloons. David Dodimead's Theseus is one of the exceptions. Philip Bowen and Martin Politer, who once played a variation on this role in refinits "Salyricon," make somewhat plain heroes and Lea-Dre-gorn is altogether too arch and knowing as the maid who lights. their lives.

The authors have cantured with precision the experience of growing up in the 1940s and 1950s, of the experience of a generation of niversity graduates from working-class homes who were brought up to believe that education offered them an escape to a better life but discovered that they were trapped by the system as surely as were their fathers.

This bitter theme underlies a collection of disparate sketches that often lack sharpness and point. The detail is perfect—but that's the least to be expected from such an autobiographical work as this. The authors let their sense of humor lead them away from the main theme, following their invention wher-

Support for Bible Story TEL AVIV. Aug. 2 (Reuters).-Israeli archaeologists have uncovered evidence supporting the Biblical tale that Joshua burned the Canasnite town of Ofek during the Israelite conquest of the region, around 1300 BC. A team from Tel Aviv University has uncovered the remnants of town gates about 10 miles northwest of here, according to a university spokesman. They discovered a charred area consistent with the story of Joshua burning the town:

Top Marks for Cranko's Stuttgart Ballet

By Oleg Kerensky

ONDON, Aug. 2 (IRT),-It is incredible that the Stuttgart Ballet which John Cranko revitalized 14 years ago has never been to London until now, despite its successes in New York and Moscow. And it is very sad that its belated triumph at Covent Garden cannot be shared by Cranko, who died suddenly year at the age of 45. He would have been proud of the way his company has held the Covent Garden stage, and delighted by the way in which English critics and audiences have recognized it as one of the world's leading ensembles.

Some of us have been preaching the gospel of Cranko and Stuttgart for many years, but even the most enthusiastic must have had some doubts how the company would look in a house associated with the Royal Ba!let, New York City Ballet, the Bolshoi and the Kirov. The answer is that it has fitted easily into that class, without any special allowances having to be made. It has become crystal clear that, with Cranko's death, the world of ballet lost the most entertaining and versatile choreographer of his generation.

The opening night gala was "Onegin," Cranko's most successful three-act ballet, originally rejected by Covent Garden's planners because it tells the same story as Tchaikovsky's opera. Like MacMillan's recent "Manon." with which it must inevitably be compared, it uses music by the composer of the opera, but taken entirely from other works. In Cranko's case this odd recipe works well, partly because Tchai-kovsky is a more varied and more dramatic composer than Massenet, and because the Tchaikovsky pieces have been very skillfully selected and arranged by Kurt-in love as in trouble. Say this for Barnard Hughes—cast as this remmant of a great character, he manages to maintain his dignity. It is an uphill struggle. There are some classic lines and a few funny scenes. However, much of the writing is sub-Shakespeare, and much of the humor is blunt. Falstaff's continuing gullibility grows tiresome and there are also gaps in plot and motivation Gussow found the performances of mixed quality, praising Hughes, George Pentecost, Joseph Boya. This is not such a successful "Onegin," because Stolze's Scarlatti-based score is dul) and undramatic, as are Elizabeth Dalton's sets. But again Cranko has told the story brilliantly, with considerable comic invention. Some of the comedy is too crude, but the pas de deux in which Kate and Petruchio knock each other about, and the wedding scene in which he forces her to nod her head and trips her into kneeling, are brilliant. Haynee's Kate is a tough little minx. She is as credible holding her fists up in preparation to box, as is playing the gentle and soulful Tatiana. VW Diversifying to Cattle In Brazil's Amazon Basin

By Marvine Howe

PIO DE JANEIRO (NYT: —Volkswagen is diversifying in Brazil for the first time—into cattle.

The Brazilian subsidiary of the West German auto maker, which is Brazil's biggest automobile manufacturer, has now begun a $30 million cattle industry in the Amazon basin area.

VW's new venture reflects a shift in the Brazilian government. ment's Amazon policy to place emphasis on the participation of large companies, rather than small settlers, for the development of the vast virgin forest area.

The VW cattle farm covers 56,000 acres and is situated at Santana do Aragusia, near a branch of the Amazon River in the northern state of Para.

Wolfgang Franz Sauer, president of VW of Brazil and of the new cattle-raising enterprise, Vale do Rio Cristalino, presented the company's new plans to the Amazon development agency

The company, according to a spokesman, "is expecting proval at any time" and thus has already begun clearing 28,000 acres of forest for grazing land. The rest of the land must be kept forested, according to conservation laws. By 1982, VW plans to be producing 110,000 head of cattle—mainly for export to the European Economic Community, Japan and the United States, company sources said.

"We went into the cattle industry for economic reasons and in answer to the government's appeal to large companies to participate in the development of the Amazon," a company spokesman said recently. The economic reasons are clear. The Amazon development agency is offering extremely attractive incentives for investment in priority areas. These apply to companies ready to go into the area by Dec. 31, 1974. The VW spokesman described them as comprising a 50 per cent income-tax reduction for 10 years and exemption from duty and taxes on machinery and equipment imported for the Amazon area project.

VW officials have acknowledged that two-thirds of the $30 million investment will result from investment incentives.

Japan Seen Catching Up to U.S. by 1985

TOKYO. Herman Kahn, the Hudson Institute director who first predicted that Japan would surpass the United States in gross national product (GNP), now thinks Japan will catch up in terms of per capita national in-come—if not GNP—by 1985. Earlier, he had predicted that accomplishment by the year 2000. The "think tank" specialist, often consulted by the U.S.

the Grumman Corp.'s F14 Tomcat fighter planes, has asked the U.S. government for "basic information" on the AlOs But a wellplaced source at Fairchild Indus-tries indicated that when a Fairchild delegation visited Iran recently, the government had expressed an interest in acquiring as many as 50 Alo planes.

The Air Force plans to buy 729 of the Al0s for a total cost of $2.3 billion, and a week ago the Defense Department gave its final approval for the project.

In a telephone interview, Thomas Turner, Fairchild's vicepresident for marketing, said that the design and performance of the A10 were being discussed with Thailand, the Netherlands, Switz-erland, Euwsit, Canada, Israel and Britain.

U.S. Tax Writers Cut Depletion Allowance

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (Reuters).-The House Ways and Means Committee voted today to reduce the oil depletion tax allowance benefit this year to 15 per cent from 22 per cent and to phase it out completely by 1978.

The depletion allowance currently is worth more than $2 billion a year in tax savings to the oi industry.

The committee agreed to include in the tax reform bill its earlier decision to tax the wind-fall profits of all companies and to phase out the oil depletion allowance. But committee chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., made an important change to start the phase-out of the oil depletion allowance this year, instead of waiting until 1975 to begin the phase out.

Problems Exist The difference, if oil remains priced at high levels, would be that Japan would have to forgo much of the investment overseas that had been foreseen before the oil crisis, he said.

"That would hurt developing countries more than it would hurt Janan," he said Mr. Kahn did see two problems for Japan. One was a labor shortage-but Japan could solve that by importing lebor, perhaps from South Korea, for temporary periods to work on specific

"Other countries can get along without faith in their governments, but not Japan. It's very had for them to have this enormous lack of faith in government," he said.

Top Probe of Price-Fixing

Major Industries Are Called Special Target

By Eileen Shanahan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (NYT). Thomas Kauper, head of the Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division, said today that his office was launching a drive simed at uncovering price-fixing and other actions that restrain competition in major industries.

Industries dominated by a few companies will be the particular target of this "intensive review," Mr. Kauper said.

He said his legal and economic staffs intended to examine those "concentrated" industries for evidence of price rigidity and other behavior that could not be expleined in terms of market supply and demand. The staff will also look for evidence that new companies are being kept out of various industries and markets by illegal means and for other anticompetitive behavior.

Mr. Kauper made his comments in a speech to a group of House Republicans that had asked him to appear before them. In his uncompromising defense of strict anti-trust enforcement policies, Mr. Kauper rejected the philosophy of "those who cry that times are tough and the best way to help American business compete, both at home and abroad. is to relax the anti-trust laws."

Independent Position His response to such appeals, Mr. Kauper said, "is to demand facts and figures to show precisehow competition weakens an industry's ability to compete."
"Such evidence is seldom forthcoming." he added.

Mr. Kauper's statement appeared to be in conflict with one made last week by Roy Ash, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, and possibly with a state-ment by President Nixon.

Both Mr. Nixon and Mr. Ash, although vague in their comments, indicated a belief that some change in emphasis in tradi-tional anti-trust enforcement was desirable and would help the fight against inflation.

U.S. Jobless Up Slightly in July

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP).showed little change from June to July, rising slightly from 5.2 to 5.3 per cent. the government reported today. Unemployment has hovered between 5 per cent and 5.2 per cent since the beginning of the year. July's increase was not considered significant by the Labor Department.

The administration's chief economic coordinator. Kenneth Rush. told Congress yesterday that the President's policies of economic restraint and budget cuts were likely to cause the unemployment rate to move up to between 5.5 and 6 per cent by the year's end. But private economists, among them Walter Heller, who testified before Congress yesterday, predict an unemployment rate of about 7 per cent by next year. The Labor Department also said that wage rates rose only about half as much last month as in both May and June, the first two months after the lifting of wage-price controls. The department's hourly earnings index went up 0.5 per cent in July. It increased 0.9 per cent in May and 1.1 per cent in June.

Nixon Seeks Monitoring of Wages-Prices

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP).— President Nixon asked Congress today to establish a cost-of-living task force to monitor wage and price increases.

The task force within the White House would be "an ongoing part of our fight against inflation," he said in a special message to Capitol Hill.

The task force would have no enforcement power and would not impose direct price and wage controls, a White House spokesman

Mr. Nixon said in his message to Congress that "while I continue oppose mandatory wage and price controls, it is essential that wages and prices be carefully watched, that labor and manage ment be constantly aware of public concern in this area, and that the government have the information it needs to persuade labor and management to do their duty in the effort to reduce in-

He said Democrats in Congress appear to be ready "to reconsider their earlier opposition" to his proposal last spring that such a nonitoring group be established. Wage-price monitoring has been done by Kenneth Rush, Mr. Nixon's economic counselor, but the President said a properly authorized group was required. Mr. Rush would head the new task force. Also serving would be the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, the budget director and several cabinet secretaries. At a briefing, White House spokesman Gerald Warren said he assumed the task force would set up individual groups for particular industries where problems might arise. He gave no exam-

Wall Street Calls For Help From The White House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (WP) -An ad hoc committee of Wall Street leaders descended on the White House yesterday, asking President Nixon to create a new agency that would be solely concerned with insuring the health the nation's capital-raising mechanism. The group, headed by Salim Lewis senior partner of Bear, Stearns & Co., the investment banking firm, met with Treasury Secretary William Simon, presidential counsellor Kenneth Rush and special trade representative

William Eberle After the meeting, spokesmen for the group said they were told the proposal deserved more thought but would not be an easy thing to bring about. "It is our opinion that the breakdown in the ability of our corporations and municipalities to raise capital is at a critical stage, and appropriate governmental attention to this matter must be given the highest priority," the group said in a letter to President Nixon. They proposed that the President "appoint an individual or create an office with sole responsibility to assure that our capital markets remain adequately viable to allow them to effectively raise the capital required by this nation.' The proposed agency would be able to recommend legislation and and Exchange Commission, the Treasury Department and the Justice Department. Among reasons given for the current impairment of the equity and debt markets were "an inadequate tax structure for giving proper incentive for people to take risks, a pervasive criticism of all

At a press conference, the leaders found themselves hard pressed to specify what kinds of actions could be taken by a new agency to return the stock and bond markets to a healthier state that were separate from general economic and monetary policy. which is in the hands of the President, Congress and the Ped and presumably would be outside the coordination of a capital mar-

From an acute shortage of Treasury paper in the middle of last week, the market now finds itself with a plethora of market-able bonds, bills and notes already in, or about to come into, The Treasury auctioned $1.5 bil-

pharmaceutical producer, has raised its net profit estimate for the six months ending Sept. 30 to around 4.2 billion yen (about $14 million) from the original forecast of 4 billion yen. Takashi Kiyama, managing director, attributes the upward revision in net profit to smooth sales in the pharmaceutical sector, increased demand for insecticides and brisk exports. An average 20 per cent price increase early this year will also contribute to better results. He says that sales for the current half-year will reach "at least" its initial forecast of 130 billion yen, up from 119,314 billion yen in the preceding half and up from 105.41 billion yen a year earlier.

One reason given for Atlantic Richfield's wanting to dispose of its retail outlets is that earnings for refined oil products in Europe are being U.S. Auto Output Falls

83 --- of 1 15..."

By Theodore Dreiser, Edited by Marguerite Tjader and John J. McAleer. University of Alabama. 346 pp. $14.50.

Reviewed by Jack Salzman

Theodora Dreiser's manuscripts were eagerly sought by publishing houses and when the appearance of a new Dreiser book was considered to be a literary "event." But now, almost 30 years ofter his death. Div read and the publication of a mode of association and succesnew Dreiser is accompanied by little fanfare or interest. Sadly, "Notes on Life" will not do much, I think, to revive interest in him. It is a book for Dreiser scholars, and Im afraid, only for them. Dreiser began working on "Notes on Life" as early as 1920, but it was only with the success of "An American Tragedy" in 1927 that he had enough financial security to explore in a systematic way his interest in human behavior and the most recent theories of physiologists and psychologists. By the time of his death in December, 1945, Dreiser had compiled thousands of sheets of notes which he had hoped to bring together as a final statement on his views of life and the meaning of man's existence. It is from this mass of material that Marguerite Tjader has put together "Notes on Life." The problem with it is simple enough: Dreiser just was not a thinker, a philosopher. What he has to sav is of interest only to the extent that it is the author of "Sister Carrie" and "An American Tragedy" who is struggling, sometimes desperately, to give meaning to his life; there is very little that is of intrinsic interest in Dreiser's world view.

Dreiser was, as we well know from his novels, a determinist who believed that the universe was a machine and man but a

U.S. Scientists To Sound Out Pyramid Room

MENLO PARK, Calif., Aug 2 (AP).—A team of U.S. scientists will take a small portable "sounder" to Egypt next month in an effort to locate a suspected secret chamber in the pyramid of Khefren.

Egyptologists say Kheiren, son of Cheops, may have used more imaginary architecture than his father, who was buried in the Great Pyramid. While a chamber was found in Khefren's ovramid, Kheiren's mummy wasn't. Thereforc, the reasoning goes, there must be another chamber to be found.

The battery-powered sounder should be able to find the chamber, says physicist Lambert Dolphin jr. of the Stanford Research Institute. The sounder emits low-frequency electromagnetic pulses, which penetrate stone, sand or earth, Mr. Dolphin says. When a wave hits a different density—such as an empty space—part of it bounces back as

THERE was a time when part of that machine Life, as he tells us in a section entitled "Mechanism Called Life," "is not a substance, but a mechanical phenomenon; it is a dynamic and kinetic transference of energy determined by physiosion-their harmony, in factwhich constitutes life."

Everything, we quickly gather, is to be seen in terms of change, of contrast: "No life, no death. No death, no life ... For life is change, contrast And only out of the storm and strain can these come." Man has no free will; our minds are nothing but "expressions of an immense matter-energy synthesis and reactions . . . " We are buffeted about by exterior forces, no matter how we delude ourselves into thinking that we are free and independent beings. The "essential tragedy of life," Dreiser informs us, is that man basically "is a creation or mechanism, accidental or not, as you wish, or a force or forces which, insofar as anyone can determine, is or are far more than his wildest flights of fancy suspects, the thing which he most craves to be, individual, enduring, but of which he is only a part and of which he is constantly seeking more—lije."

So it goes for almost 350 pages -- Theme and variation, point and counterpoint, all on the subject of life. It is too much, Dreiser is neither poet nor philosopher; "Notes on Life" is naive, tedious. But then, what does any of this have to do with the Dreiser who really matters? That Dreiser transcended his ideas, as the writer who in 1900 stormed the barricades of genteel America with "Sister Carrie," the naturalist who wept for Jennie Gerhardt; the creator of Clyde Griffiths and "An American Tragedy," the writer who want-ed to join the Communist party at the same moment that he was creating Solon Barnes, his great Quaker hero ("The Bulwark). At its best, Dreiser's art could not be limited by his philosophy, just as "Notes on Life" cannot move beyond its lack of art. Dreiser, after all, was an ungainly, tiresome frequently boorish man. But he also was a behemoth of a man, a writer whose humanity usually had to struggle against his own turgid prose. Certainly, he was not always successful in the struggle, But there were moments when he was, when he lumbered into greatness. And it is for these occasions-milestones in the history of American letters -for the writing of "Sister Carrie" an "An American Tragedy" in particular, that Dreiser must be read and remembered.

Jack Saleman, an associate pro-Jessor of English at Brooklyn's Long Island University, is the author of the recently published "Theodore Dreiser: The Critical Reception," among other books. & Zas Washington Post.

Draft of Rule on Amateurism Is Released by Olympic Unit President Lord Killanin includes

LAUSANNE, Aug. 2 (AP).-Publicity contracts and remuneration of athletes seeking to compete in Olympic games are permitted with limitations in the final draft of Olympic Rule 26 on eligibility, published here today by the executive board of the International Olympic Commit-

The limitations essentially are that an athlete's publicity gains must go to the national sports organization to which the athlete bound, and all money he gets must come from them. The executive board will present the draft at the next meeting of the IOC in Vienna Oct. 20.

The by-laws to the rule in the draft leave the IOC the choice between two definitions of an athlete who would be barred form Olympic games on grounds of professionalism. Version No. 1 says a competitor

Driver Finds 1st Taste Of Grand Prix Is Bitter

By Bernard Kirsch

2 (IHT). - There is a wrong driver's name on the team truck and another wrong name on the program. The name of the driver of the Token formula-one car is Ian Ashley, who will be making his grand prix debut on the wrong Ashley swallowed his first bitter taste of the big time today in a qualifying run for Sunday's German Grand Prix. The trials and race are being held on the Nuerburgring track, known with-out affection as The Ring. Ashley's Token was 36 seconds slower than the best car, a Ferrari which clocked 7 minutes 00R seconds on the 142-mile circuit, which has nearly 20 humps, 170 corners, three slots where the cars became airbound and a hairpin turn seconds after the starting line. The twisting road defeated one man today, New Zealander Howden Ganley. His Japanese Maki skidded, went off a guard rail and, when it finally came to a stop with the entire front demolished, both of Ganley's ankles were broken. He was taken to a local hospital for treatment. Ganley had raced at the ring before, but this was his first grand prix race in more than three months. Mike Hailwood also crashed in his McLaren, but was uninjured.

Took a Tour

Ashley met The Ring for the first time yesterday morning, when he paid 5 deutsch marks to take a tour of the treacherous course in his rented car. The idea was to become acquainted with the circuit. When there is no racing here, anyone may take his car for a spin on the track.

Ashley was on the course again today with the 30 grand prix drivers who are here for the 10th race of the season. After going for his first lap, the 26-yearold Englishman, whose father was a test pilot for the Concorde prototype, said that "on one bump, you come off it faster than you thought you would. What wou do then is swallow your pride and back off a little." That wasn't the only action for the young driver today.

His car, which he met for the first time Wednesday, gave him almost as much trouble as The Ring. First his gear lever broke. "I was lucky," he said, "It hap-pened on a straight. If it had happened on a bend, it would have been too late."

Then, with the action almost finished for today, the Token got a flat tire on a bending turn of the longest course on the grand prix circuit. "I wanted to go left, but the car kept on going right," Ashley said. "I didn't even ADENAU, West Germany, Aug. have time to be frightened." But the machine will be back tomorrow for the second day of trials and Ashley will be a day away from his first grand prix drive.

When this formula-one season started, Ashley was driving a formula-5000 car while Tom Pryce, whose name is on the truck, was the team's driver. Pryce moved over to the Shadow team and his place in the driver's seat was taken by David Purley, whose name is on the program.

Purley tried to qualify at the last grand prix, in Brands Hatch, England, but failed. Then a backer who had promised £40,000 pulled out of the grand prix scene and two new sponsors, Richard Oaten, an oil trader, and the Chequered Flag Sports Car agents stepped in with the money. One of the conditions of sponsorship was that Ashley Ashley and car will probably start way in the back of the field on Sunday. As of now, the front row is taken by Ferrari teammates Niki Lauda, a point behind leader Emerson Fittipaldi in the drivers' standings, and Clay Regazzoni, who is tied for third with Jody Scheckter.

"I intend to take it easy and just finish the race." Ashley said. On The Ring, especially for a first-timer, it is a mighty goal.

Emperor's New Clothes

WASHINGTON-Chairman: The clerk will read the articles of abdication. Clerk: Resolved that the Emperor violated his oath of office when he paraded down the streets

under a canopy with no clothes That he made false and misieading statements to the effect that he was wearing clothes at 🥻 the time, and that he was party to a coverup and interfered in

Buchwald a lawful investigation as to whether in effect he did on said day parade in the Chairman: Each member of this committee will have 5 minutes for the purposes of debate only. I recognize the courtier from Grannda, Grazinda: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, The question we have been asked to vote on today—a question that could affect the empire for generations to come-is did the Emperor know he had no clothes on and what did he do about it.

Let me review the evidence. The Emperor, we can all agree, spent the taxpayers' money on ciothes for himself. He had a coat for every hour of the day. Now from the Emperor's own parchments we know that on June 17 two cheats arrived and claimed they were weavers and that they could make such magnificent, clothes that they would become invisible to anyone who was unfit for the office he held.

We know the Emperor ordered a set of robes and gave a great deal of cash in advance to the The Emperor then sent one of his closest aides to confirm that they indeed were working

When the aide went to see the cheats, he discovered that they weren't wearing anything at all The aide went back and lied to the Emperor. Then on March 21 the Emperor himself went to the weavers and he saw with his own eres that there was no cloth; there were no trousers: there was no robe. Did he arrest the weavers? Did he report them to the justice minister?

No. Mr. Chairman. He praised them as two of the finest men he had ever known and he told the country they had woven him a magnificent set of clothes. That, gentlemen, was the beginning of the coverup; a coverup that continued until the very day when the Emperor walked down our streets in nothing more than his birthday suit. Chairman: Your time has expired. We will hear from the other side now. The courtier from Tearturnia.

Tearturnia: Mr. Chairman, I can't believe that I have been sitting here for six months and heard the same evidence as my learned friend from Grazinda, If you read the Emperor's parchments as I have done, you can only come to one conclusion. The Emperor was wearing clothes on the day in question.

Now if you follow the story. the Emperor did not take the word of his aide concerning the weavers-he sent another aide and this aide also reported back that the weavers had indeed made a magnificent robe for his imperial majesty. Let us remember that at this point in time the Emperor was busy with affairs of state and could not devote time to his clothes. His closest advisers lied to him but, where, where in all the evidence is there anything to indicate the Emperor himself was part of the coveruo?

Now we have been speaking of evidence. The only evidence that the Emperor wore no clothes came from a little boy who was sitting on his father's shoulders as the Emperor went by

The boy said and I quote from his testimony, But he has nothing on." Now anybody can read anything they want into that statement. They can read the Emperor had nothing on his head. They can read he had nothing on for the evening. I defy anyone to show me where the boy said. "He has no clothes on." And even if he did-even if he did, I am asking this august body-are we going to believe the word of a little boy or are we going to believe the word of our Emperor, the leader of the greatest empire in the world. Mr. Chairman, if the Emperor says he had clothes on, it's good enough for me

Chairman: The hearing is recessed until tomorrow at 10 a.m.

Preminger, O'Toole, 'Rosebud'

week's Paris bureau as a cover. Otto Preminger-who once staged "The Front Page" for Max Reinhardt in Vienna and put the editor in white tie and tails has this time opted for harsh realism and has moved his film unit three flights down from Newsweek's real offices to the newsroom of the International Herald Tribune, which is early John Peter Zenger in decor—dun colored walls, file cabinets in faded arsenic green, centenary linoleum, and invaluable accretions of Gauloise butts and Paris soot. Preminger has often said he likes using real people instead of actors. New York ex-mayor John Lindsay has just left after playing a U.S. senator. Newsweek bureau chief Ed Behr is playing a Newsweek bureau chief, and despite the early hour the newsroom is filled with real journalists typing with fearful industry and edging their profiles into the scene, which consists of four lines, two for O Toole (who used to be tea boy at the Yorkshire Evening News) and two for Behr. Seven takes and it's over.

Preminger, who with his very pink skin and hooded eyes looks like a flayed turtle, is in beam-ing form for the press. He is the most famous shouter in Hollywood and has left sour memories with such actresses as Jean Seberg ("He's the world's most charming dinner guest and most sadistic director") and Dyan Cannon (expletive deleted), while even his friend Billy Wilder once remarked, "Otto's gone to his summer home-Beisen," and author Allen Drury said of the filming of "Advise and Consent," "This is the first time a film about the democratic process has been made by a dictator." But this morning everyone is happy and a Tribune deskman has caught the acting bug:

"I also do some singing," he announces shyly, but no one

DARIS (IHT).-Peter O'Toole on the crew listens. They are is a CIA man using News- dashing to the next location, a replica of a Paris police station on the other side of town. A Preminger film is highly organized.

This film is called "Rosebud," not after the sled of "Citizen Kane." but after a yacht which in the film is high jacked by terrorists.

The theme of highjacking and political kidnapping is very timely and the fact that Preminger bought the French novel on which the film is based last September testifies to his astuteness in taking on controversial subjects. But he can hardly be called a bold filmmaker. As an English critic observed of "Exodus," the film managed not only to be pro-Israel, but pro-Arab and pro-British as well.

Aside from regretting that he hasn't turned out another "Laura," most film critics don't spend much thought on Preminger these days but auteuristes on the other hand are starting to rank him high; an American says he has greater stylistic consistency than Bergman and rates him right up there with Douglas Sirk, the pre-eminent director of Lans Turner, while an article in the leading French film magazine Positif finds him Hegelian, existentialistic and megalomaniscal Preminger himself had the last word when, at the Paris Cinematheque he was asked the traditional question: What is your favorite

"My favorite picture," he replied, "is my Picasso." Peter O'Toole, asked if Preminger has yelled at him, says, "Hasn't he yelled at everybody?"

O'Toole took some time off from films, during which he rusticated in Ireland and had a feverish season with his aima mater, the Bristol Old Vic. 'It seemed a marvelous idea before I did it. It's odd, I don't know how I managed to do three and a half years of

"It was so successful I may do it again-I don't think anyone else is demented enough to do it. We described it as that marvelous literary cop-out, a work in progress. I think it's the most potent new work I've come across. It's not a play, though the place for it is a

"Judgment," by Barry Collins, deals with a nasty incident in the Soviet Army during the last O'Toole played an accused Russian officer, directly addressing the audience as if they were judges:

ertory. I was very happy doing nothing. I made no plans to write the book or learn the language, I found the first week trying, then the day wasn't long enough.
I did lay some sewer pipes with the help of a supero publication called Bungalow Bliss. My wife called me the Drain Brain. And I built a pump house. It's not the Taj Mahal and it's not exactly square, but it's my pump house." What had O'Toole built be-"An ill reputation," he replies. He has got better looking now there are silver threads among the gold, but claims to be greatly changed. "Twe aged so much no one knows me. They only know my suit." The worn checked suit, which seems to bear the imprint of O'Toole's sharp bones, is his costume for "Rosebud." He also wears what he calls "my lewd hat," a distressing piece of millinery that looks as if it were made of lichen and that was given to him some years ago to go up the Amazon in. "I get invited to parties for my hat, not me," he boasts. "To my astonishment, Otto asked me to wear it for this film. The hat," he says, slapping it on, "is my performance."
